THE VIETUE OF EARLY RISING.

[From the London Saturday Review.] In the whole string of the virtues, dowdiest mother, dance with the most disappointed of the maidenhood, rather than sink to this. Sitting in corners comprises a very large subject, or, rather, array of subjects. To know how to sit in corners well and prudenty requires a vast experience and steady head; so, until you have much extended your acquaintance and knowledge of humanity, I would recommend you to avoid that most agreeable of the pleasures of ball-going. It is not for a novice to penetrate at once the inner depths of fashion's mysteries, and I shall therefore put off my advice on this subject until I come, in a future letter, to the great subject of dirting, which, of course, comprises the art of sitting in in the whole string of the trades, major or minor, cardinal or otherwise, there is not one about which the possessors are so abominably conceited as this. People endowed with so uncomfortable gift are, no doubt, entitled to some fittle indemnification; but no degree of the artifaction could instif the trades. elf-mortification could justify the pre-conterous airs of superior virtue which copie who turn out of bed earlier than people who tarn out of bed earner than their neighbors always give themselves. Nobody was over ten minutes in the so-ciety of a confirmed early riser without being made sware of the fact, and di-rectly or indirectly, snubbed for not be-ing one himself. Now, is early rising such a tirtue, and are these early birds withous that we are bound of course, comprises the art of sitting in so very virtuous, that we are bound tamely to submit to this? Of course we what young men bid.

The practice is a healthy one they say, and they always brag of their superior appetites at breakfast, as if there was something meritorius in an extra consumption of ham and sees. Now, the simple fact of the matter is that at least nine cases out of ten your early riser is merely a fidgety, restless animal, who is incapable of reposing after the fashion or at the season ordained by civilized mankind, and as to defined by civilized mankind, and as to his inhaling the pure morning air, that is all moonshine: it is pure self-conceit, that he inflates himself with. In fine that he inflates himself with. In the weather he struts about crowing over a stumbering world; in wet he mouns about the house a repreach and hindermore to the servants setting about their morning ministrations, and all through the period of family prayers he is filled with pharasacial pride that he is not as their men whom the prayer-bell somewhat their toilet. WOMANLY Modesty.—Man loves the mysterious. A cloudless sky, the full-blown rose, leaves him unmoved; but the violet which hides its blushing beauthe violet which hides its blushing beauties behind its leaves, and the moon when she emerges from behind a cloud, are to him sources of inspiration and pleasure. Modesty is to morit what shade is to figure in painting; it gives it boldness and prominence. Nothing all is more to female beauty than modesty; if sheds around the countenance a halo of light which is borrowed from virgin. esty, it sheds around the countenance a balo of light which is borrowed from virtue. Botanists have given the rosy hue which tinges the cup of the rose, the nand defleate hne is the only paint that Christian virtue should use; it is the richest of ornament. A woman without modesty is like a faded flower, which diffuses any nuwholesome edge, and diffuses an unwholesome odor, and which the prudent gardener will throw Her destiny is melancholy, or it ends in shame and repentance. Source passes like the flower of the aloc, thich blooms and dies in a few hours, but modesty gives the female character charms which supply the place of the transitory freshness of nature. Nothing ought to be more precious to a commuthan a pure, modest, refined and noble womanhood. Men universally agree in this proposition. But how few of them are disposed to maintain it uncompromisingly otherwise than in the abstract! Do they reflect that there would be fallen women, if men scrupulously re-spected the honor of the sex? Do they onsider that female licentionsness is only a translation of male libertinism? Ah' if men were what they should be, women would, indeed, be little lower than the angels.

ETERNITY.—"Suppose," says an emi-nent writer, "some little insect, so small as to be imperceptible to the human eye Iron and Steel, were to carry this world by its tiny mouthfuls to the most distant star the mouthfuls to the most distant star the hand of God has placed in the heavens. Hundreds of millions of years are required for the performance of a single journey. The insect commences upon the leaf of a tree and takes its little load, so small that even the microscope cannot discover that it is gone, and sets out upon its almost endless journey. After millions and millions of years have rolled away, it arrives back again to take its second load. What interminable ages must pass before one leaf be removed! Ob, the mind sinks down perfectly exhausted with such contemplations. Yes; our existence rons parallel with that of God. So long as He endures, so long shall that soul which He hath breathed into our bosom glow and burn; but it must glow in the brilliance and the beauty of heaven, or burn with lurid flame and inextinguishable woe!"

HINTE TO A YOUNG BALL-GOER .-- Be very careful not to pull down your shirt-sleeves, or up your collar, or, in fact, to do anything to your costume as you enter the ball-room. It implies nervousness or uneasiness with yourself to do so; and your one great endeavor in all societies should be to appear theroughly at your should be to appear theroughly at your case, and satisfied, with vanity or cor-combry, with your dress and appearance. Do not stand idle, do not dance over-Do not stand idle, do not dance over-much. The one implies a small number of friends, the other wastes valuable time, and prevents you keeping that con-stant looking around you which is es-sential to success. Be introduced to knowable people quietly; there is no neces-sity to advertise to bystanders that you did not know them before.
